Title of Article: Sex and Exposure to Death and Dying as Determinants to Coping with Bereavement.

Authors: Alao, A.A.

Date of Publication: 1984

Abstract:

The study investigated the interest of subjects on the issue of death, causes associated to death, the preferred mode of death announcement and the emotional reactions and adjustment patterns to death. The study revealed that a substantial number of subjects were frightened and the mention of death and varying causes were attributed to death. Most of the subjects preferred an elderly person breaking the news of death. The emotional reactions displayed by female subjects were more immediate compared to male subjects. Most of the subject would like to face reality about the loss and some coping strategies were discussed.