Title of Article: Age and Academic Classification in Relation to the Nature of Problems of African Students in the United States of America.

Authors: Alao, A.A.

Date of Publication: 1979

Abstract:

The paper discussed the problems of African students in the United States of America. The responses of students revealed that the students experienced more problems in the following areas: social, recreational, activities, finance and living conditions and employment, social and personal relations, future vocational and educational adjustment. Problems were more frequent for students in the age range 21 to 25 years, doctoral students had a lower problem compared to undergraduate and master's degree students.
