Title of Article: The Impact of Globalisation on the Educational System in Nigeria

Author(s): Imhonopi, D. and Urim, U. M

Outlet: Asian Social Science, Canada. Vol. 8, No. 2.

Date:

Abstract: Globalisation has increasingly led to the integration of cultures, economies, markets, political systems and technologies among nations today. The hitherto constraints posed by time and space have been eliminated as more nations are becoming aware of their environment and the happenings within it. The Nigerian educational system has continued to evolve over time as a response to the stimuli from the external environment. While there are obvious disadvantages regarding the impact of globalisation on Nigeria’s educational system such as brain drain, internet crime, plagiarism, and erosion of positive values, there are also many advantages such as the introduction of a paperless economy, easy access to information, diffusion of technology, increased knowledge sharing, inter alia. This study is concerned with how the Nigerian educational system can maximise the gains and opportunities provided by globalisation and how it can also reduce its exposure to its negative effects.