1.1. CVE519 Student Project I (0 Units)

Taken in each of the final year semesters-total of 6 units. Final year students individual or group projects in one of the several areas of civil engineering, under the supervision of the academic staff of the department or school. These independent projects may involve literature research, design elementary fabrication, construction or feasibility studies. A formal report of this required at the end of the year. Students may also be required to present their results orally before a panel of examiners.
