COLLEGE-WIDE COURSES FOR COLLEGE OF DEVELOPMENT STUDIES (CDS)

These courses are compulsory for ALL students in College of Development Studies (CDS) (100 - 400 levels).

Introduction

The Human Development courses (HMD) are College-based compulsory courses, specially designed to bring all the students in the College of Development Studies together, thus providing a unified and bonded framework for pulling all the strands of the human development process together, irrespective of their programmes. These courses are structured in such a way that they will equip students with developmental ideas that will enhance their ability, to grasp the fundamental strands of human operations, industrial, economic, social, educational and religious settings nationally and internationally. The courses will help in shaping the students' vision, relating their respective core courses with the ever-challenging demands of man and the society; they will also look at the various aspects of life stages in relation to work contexts and development. In order to achieve these objectives, HMD courses are designed to be taught to the students in both Alpha and Omega semesters at all levels. Below are the descriptions of HMD courses from 100L to 400L.
