HMD111 Fundamentals of Human Development I (1 Unit)

Department of Languages

Covenant University
1. HMD111

1.1. HMD111 Fundamentals of Human Development I (1 Unit)

This is an introductory course to the fundamentals of human development. It is designed to enable students acquire the rudiments of human development. The course shall explore topics like the biological dimension of human development, understanding the phases of biological development, the unfolding physical structure and its impact on the human being; every stage and biological differentials in growth patterns. Other related topics to be treated shall include the meaning of development, theories, models and trends of development. Topics like the development of human personality, developmental needs of man, aspiration and social interaction in relation to human development shall also be considered.