SOC325 Gender and Development (2 Units)

Department of Sociology

Covenant University
1. SOC325
1.1. SOC325 Gender and Development (2 Units)

The course is an examination of the political, economic and social factors affecting the differential participation of men and women in the productive process in society. Issues of gender and its relationship to culture, poverty, education, health, migration and urbanization will be discussed. The relationship between sex and gender is also given a place in this course. Gender stereotyping and factors that influence and reinforce gender typing are also discussed.